New waterslide concepts

Waterslide manufacturer Polin has opened a third factory in Turkey, and hopes to be busy with orders for two new attractions.

The Dragero is a 40-metre-long, four-lane mat racing slide that starts with a big drop, then travels uphill, through a tunnel, round a corner and back down into a dry run out – at roughly the same place riders started. The tunnel segment includes natural lighting effects. Orders have already been received from Iran and Hungary.

The Double Wave, meanwhile, is a four-person ride featuring a pair of criss-crossing slopes and a dry-run out. The first versions of the ride will be constructed in Turkey and North Africa.

Customers wanting a brighter product than the models you see here can benefit from Polin's patented "Magic Shine" finish.

SplashRally is one of two new waterslide attractions from Splashtacular. Featuring a six-lane water raceway and figure-eight layout, riders – or racers – sit in two or three-passenger tubes and race to a grand prix style finish marked by water cannons and rider's times.

The other new Splashtacular ride is 360Rush, which launches two riders simultaneously down
